

JOB DESCRIPTION

RESEARCH INTERNSHIP

PathFinders ensures the most vulnerable and unsupported children in Hong Kong are protected and respected, and their migrant mothers – predominantly current or former Migrant Domestic Workers (MDWs) – are empowered to find a path to a bright future. We are currently looking for a bright young mind to join our team for 2 months for a research project.

Position Information:

Title: Quantitative Research Intern

Duration: 2 months (part-time – 2.5 days per week; remote available)

Reports To: Ms. Greta Lai

Department: Public Engagement Team

Expected start date: late November 2020

Allowance: this position is completely voluntary, but travel subsidy will be provided

Job Description:

Key Results Expected:

- Provide research assistance for the production of a research project analysing public opinion on MDW pregnancy.
- Source and code online comments from the Internet and analyse them according to a standardised methodology.
- Produce a final visualised report with data.

Recruitment Qualifications

- Undergraduate student in statistics, or any social sciences (graduate student preferred);
- Background in working in a data-driven research environment;
- Experience in conducting desk-based research;
- Highly proficient in English and Chinese;
- Advanced Microsoft office excel skills;
- Good track record in meeting deadlines with limited supervision.

This is a voluntary position, presenting an exciting opportunity to learn more about migrant issues and to contribute to influencing social change.

To apply, please e-mail your CV and cover letter to greta.lai@pathfinders.org.hk with the subject line 'Research internship, your name' as soon as possible.
